Will Dedicate New Boulevard On Saturday Afternoon Next

The improved highway between Monongahela and Elkhorn on the Allegheny side of the river, will be completed today, and will be opened with a formal dedication on Saturday afternoon.

This road, which has been designated as the "hanging boulevard," was built by J. W. Butler, of McKeesport the contract being awarded to him over three years ago. As originally specified the roadway was to have been 12 feet wide paved with brick. However, the commissioners of Allegheny county determined later to change the specifications. and as a consequence the roadway was made 18 feet wide and laid with reinforced concrete. This new road is said to be the best in the state. The concreting is seven inches at the side and nine inches in the center, and is constructed to stand up under the heaviest traffic.

On Saturday afternoon automobile owners have been invited to take part in the dedication, and speaking will take place from the eastern end of the Monongahela river bridge in Axelton. After the dedication which will be preceded by an automobile trip over the new roadway, the road will be closed for a period of two weeks. in order to allow the concrete to thoroughly dry and to permit of the erection of the guard fences along the way. No trucks or solid tired vehicles will be permitted on the road on Saturday, only cars with pneumatic tires.

The completion of the road is a source of great g ratification to the officials of Allegheny county and to the people in this section of the valley. It gives an improved boulevard all theway to Pittsburg on the Allegheny county side of the river.

MORE PAY AND A SHORTER DAY

A sharp increase in basi wages of all coal miners in the United States and Canada, the six-hour day and 30-hour week are written in the program for the international convention of the United Mine Workers of America which opened in Cleveland on Monday. Unless granted by November a continent wide strike in collieries will be recommended.

Strike talk is deprecated by officials of the miners. who assume confidence that an agreement with the operators will be reached without recourse to this measure, and the word "strike" is little heard among delegates whose talk is mostly prices and living conditions.

If you can't forget your troubles, you can at least go away and allow others to forget them.

Money can't take the place of brains but it'll make folks pretend to think you have them.

OFFICERS HAVE EXCITING TIME IN ARRESTING PEGG BROTHERS

Former Charleroi Residents Charged with Stealing Autos

Oliver and Harry Pegg, formerly of Charleroi, but later of Mt. Pleasant, Ohio, were arrested by Pittsburg officers in the latter town on Monday, and are now being detained in the police station of Pittsburg as suspicious persons.

The story of the arrest of the Pegg brothers furnishes a thrilling tale of pursuit and capture, the prisoners being charged with the theft of at least ten automobiles, one of which was stolen from a Charleroi owner, it is alleged.

Pittsburg police received a tip on Sunday that automobiles were being sold at aridiculously low price to residents of Mt. Pleasant, Ohio. This is a Quaker community and quite a number of this sect are alleged to have purchased cars from the Pegg brothers, who were to have opened a high class garage in that town today.

After receiving the information Lieut. Harry Mellen of the Pittsburg police department, detailed three detectives of the city force to accompany him, and the trip was made to the Ohio town. There they represented themselves as members of a construction company which wished to purchase automobiles, believing they could be secured cheaper in the smaller towns than in the city. In this manner they were able to look over a number of cars, and on pretense of making an examination obtained the motor and manufacturer's number. On making a comparison with the numbers on cars reported to have been stolen they were able to establish the fact that certain cars in the community had been stolen.

They also ascertained that the cars had been sold by the Pegg brothers and then the officers set about to apprehend the men wanted. They secreted themselves in a cornfield on the outskirts of the town, where the real adventure began. The Quakers finding out that the officers were in hiding and believing they were prompted by some ulterior motive, immediately surrounded the field, for the purpose of protecting their property. However, the officers after waiting for some time saw Oliver Pegg driving into town in a new car which bore no license plate. They immediately surrounded him, and taking him from the car he was driving, placed him in their own machine to bring him to Pittsburg. The officers' car was soon surrounded by members of the Quakers' colony, but they managed to get away with their prisoner and brought him to Washington Tuesday night, and thence to Pittsburg.

Two of the officers, however, had been detailed to arrest the younger

HERE'S REPUBLICANISM.

The Republican Committee of Hennepin County, Minnesota, has recently adopted a platform which breathes Americanism and Republicanism from beginning to end, and which should serve as a model for Republican party platforms for the ensuing year, despite the fact that the Republican majority in Congress may compel the adoption of certain identical provisions in the course of this session. The Hennepin County platform is succinctly synopsized by the Minnesota Tribune, as follows:

"The declaration denounces the Shantung agreement as dishonorable; demands continued full effectiveness of the Monroe Doctrine; calls for such a protective tariff as will keep our industries to capacity operation and permit the payment of wages required for the American standards of living; indorses an equitable participation by labor in the fruits of its toil; declares unalterable opposition to efforts to substitute Russian sovietism for Twentieth Century democracy; depores strikes and lock-outs as costly blights upon the nation's prosperity; urges private ownership and operation of railroads under strict government control; denounces legislation in the interest of a class as against the weal of all; exhorts intelligent economy in government administration; favors a liberal land policy for the benefit of service men; calls for the suppression of unjust profiteering wherever it may be found: asks for legislation that will put and keep the American mercantile marine in the forefront; demands adequate prohibition enforcement legislation; expresses faith in the constructive political influence of women voters; proposes such immigration legislation as will keep out enemies of responsible democratic government, and voices a staunch adherence to 'nationalism in its highest sense,' as opposed to any creed inimical to American institutions."

These are fundamentals which every Republican will approve and support and which every decent American citizen should get behind and push into operation by 1921. That means that Woodrow Wilson and his tatterdemalion army of internationalists and parlor bolshevists will be banished from those high seats of authority from which they have fomented the devilish bedlam which now distracts the American people.

OUR ARMY'S DOUBLE SERVICE

The ability of the "fighting parson" or pious citizen to give a good account of himself in battle is a act of human experience well known for centuries. Cromwell's pikemen, humming "a surly hymn" as they laid about them with a will, spread their fame throughout Europe. The most conspicuous example of recent times is of course, Sergeant York, the intensely religious "dead shot" from Tennessee whose famous exploit in the Argonne forest was described by General Foch as the greatest individual feat of the world war or of previous wars. In a sense the achievement of our whole army in the late war represented the formidable indignation of the righteous man, for our two million soldiers went to France, not for any material gain for this country, but only to undo a great wrong and each of the two million carried a new Testament as part of his equipment.

It is due to the fame of this last item of the American soldier's equipment, according to report, that France now "wants 20,000 New Testaments" Twenty thousand is not enough for the French army, but may be considered a good beginning. After the bloody Revolution against corrupt aristocracy more than a century ago France radically revolted against religious observances, even abolishing Sunday for a time and no doubt tending in great part to shelve the Bible itself Perhaps there will now be a more complete return toward the normal in such matters, and it may be that in carrying the New Testament as well as deliverance to France the American army performed a double service.

LET THE PEOPLE DECIDE

Secretary Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor is quoted assaying that "organized labor organized labor to pursue in a report should be able to elect a sufficient number of members of Congress to obtain legislation desired by organized labor." And thereon Mr. Morrison misjudges the proper course. Republican form of government by men. If organized labor can elect a sufficient number of men to Congress to obtain the legislation it desires, then it has the endorsement of the people and it should get the legislation which the people desire But the issue should be clearly and definitely placed before the people. Let the candidates state specifically what they will vote for if elected and then let the voters decide.

The report of the railway commission shows that 1590 relatives of officials hold annual railway passes under government ownership. Those who know this administration's disposition to look out for its relatives, that isn't surprising, but there ought to be some explanation of the fact that four mother-in-laws are on the list.

Practically no man wishes his son to follow the business in which the father is engaged. and a good many sons are willing to let it go at that, if the father can make enough money for both.

If you only do as much as you are expected to do. some day you'll do less than you expected to be doing.

You can tell what kind of a man he is by whether the children run to him or from him.

Prices have gone so high that it is now considered the thing to kick about them whether you care or not.

Now where would you be if every law were enforced to the letter?

brother Harry, but before they could reach his home he had made his getaway. After learning that he had recently married and that his father-in-law lived near Columbiano, in Columbiana county, the officers started for that point driving all night. reaching there shortly after Pegg had arrived. He was placed under arrest and brought on to Pittsburg where he was also placed in the police station.

It is said the brothers have confessed to numerous thefts of automobiles, which they had sold at low figures, from the proceeds of which they had expected to open a garage in Mt. Pleasant O.

Oliver Pegg served in the American army in France and only returned home last spring. It is said he had married an English girl while abroad. His brother Harry married the daughter of a wealthy farmer in Columbiana, only a short time ago. Oliver Pegg claims to have been gassed and wounded in France.

The arrest of the two men will likely clear up a lot of auto thefts which have been taking place in this section of the state.

DONORA FIREMEN COMPLAIN OF DRIVERS

Donora firemen are complaining of a condition which at times has bothered the firemen of Charleroi, that of auto drivers rushing pell mell to a fire when the alarm is sounded. In Donora last Saturday the fire truck had some difficulty in reaching the scene because of the frantic rush of some auto drivers to be first on the scene. and which hindered the fire truck making the time it is capable of.

SAMPECK'S Boys' Suits

Jack M. Teitelbaum.

To Clean Wallpaper.

Cut into eight half-quarters a stale loaf. With one or two pieces, after having blown off all the dust from the paper by means of a pair of bellows (if handy), begin at the top of the room, holding the crust in the hand and wiping lightly downward with the crumb about half a yard at each stroke till the upper part is completely cleaned all around, then go around with the like sweeping stroke downward, always commencing each successive course a little higher than the upper stroke had extended till the bottom is finished. This operation, if carefully performed, will frequently make very old paper look almost equal to new. Great caution must be used not to rub paper hard nor to attempt cleaning it the cross or horizontal way. The dirty part of the bread, too, must each time be cut away and pieces renewed as soon as at all necessary.

Glamor of the Past.

Egypt is the most popular field for the explorations of the archeologists, but Guatemala and Mexico, on our own hemisphere, offer fields glamorous with the same mysteries. Even in southwestern America the ruins of cliff dwellings and other monuments of dead-and-gone peoples furnish intensely interesting and fascinating fields for investigation and theory. No man can stand in the presence of these things and fail to be thrown into strange thoughts. Indeed, for that matter, one looks with strange feelings upon even a deserted house in which the tenants were only of a generation past. But it is when no one remains alive who was part of a past that it becomes of first-order interest. This is why the old Franciscan missions of California now possess so great a fascination for the world.

Twain's Many Abilities.

Mark Twain's summary of his own many-sidedness is revealed in one of his letters to William Dean Howells in "Mark Twain's Letters." He was a miner, he says, a prospector, a Mississipi pilot, and a traveling printer. "And," he adds, "I was a lecturer on the public platform a number of seasons, and so I know a great many secrets about audiences—secrets not to be got out of books. . . . And I am a publisher . . . and I have been an author for 20 years and an ass for 55. Now, then; as the most valuable capital or culture or education usable in the building of novels is personal experience I ought to be well equipped for that trade. I surely have the equipment, a wide culture, and all of it real, none of it artificial, for I don't know anythig about books."

Swedenborg Prolific Inventor.

Among the things Swedenborg invented were tanks for testing the power of ship models, an ear trumpet for the deaf, a method of curing smoky chimneys; to meet an emergency, he invented a method of getting ships fourteen miles inland over galleys. He took a lively interest in machine guns and even sketched a flying machine. His discoveries about the functioning of the human body were 150 years ahead of his times and his publications on this subject show that his knowledge of the ductless gland and the relation of the brain to the respiration have never been improved upon to this day.

Ancient Cat Laws.

While there are very few specific laws in relation to cats in modern statutes—their legal status being that of ferae naturae—it is interesting to know that in the ancient law the cat occupied a very different position. "Among our elder ancestors the ancient Britons," says Blackstone, "cats were looked upon as creatures of intrinsic value, and the killing or stealing of one was a grievous crime, and subjected the offender to a fine, especially if it belonged to the king's household, and was the custos horrei regii, for which there was a peculiar forfeiture." The fortunate cat that held the office of warden of the royal barn was thus protected by the law: "If anyone shall kill or bear away by theft the cat which is warden of the royal barn, it shall be hung up by the tip of its tail, its head touching the floor, and over it shall be poured out grains of wheat until the last hairs of its tail shall be covered by the grain. An English law of the present day provides that "the master of a ship freighted with goods which are the subject of depredation by rats is bound to have cats on board, or he cannot charge the insurer of such cargo."

Old City of Bruges.

Bruges, which means in the Flemish tongue "the place of bridges," is said to have been a city in the seventh century. The name Flanders was applied to it originally, and not to the district, as was the case later. It was fortified by Baldwin II, count of Flanders, who married Elstrud, daughter of Alfred the Great of England. Before 1180 Bruges was the recognized capital of Flanders, but after that Ghent superseded it in political importance. It was a seaport until about 1490, when the passage of the Zwyn became completely filled with silt. It was at the heighht of its prosperity in the fourteenth century, when it was the northern counterpart of Venice and its bourse regulated the rate of exchange in Europe. In recent years it has again become a seaport through construction of a ship canal connecting it with Zeebrugge.

Great Poets Men of Knowledge.

All great poets have been men of great knowledge, Some have gathered it from books, as Spenser and Milton; others from keen observation of men and things, as Homer and Shakespeare. On the other hand the poetry of Ossian, whether genuine or not, is an instance of no inconsiderable poetical talent struggling with the disadvantages of a want of knowledge. It is this want which renders it so singularly montonous. The poverty of the poet's ideas confined him to a narrow circle, and the poems are a series of changes rung upon a few thoughts and a few images. Single passages are beautiful and affecting, but each poem, as a whole, is tiresome and uninteresting.—Bryant.

Crow Has Earned Farmer's Hate.

Most commonly the crow is hated by the farmer because it pulls up the young corn to get the soft seed kernels at the root, and everywhere is to be seen the scarecrow in the newly planted corn fields. Later on the damage they do to the corn crop can hardly be estimated, because they peck the end of the young ears, allowing the water to enter the shuck and rot the corn.

Home-Made Martyr.

John G. says, in a long letter of misery, that nobody understands him in this world. If you take up that role, John, then nobody can be expected to understand you. Don't try to make yourself out a martyr. Put your back into life and carry a burden for another. You'll soon find then that you are understood and appreciated.—Exchange.

In this world things do not "happen." A Piano house does not become great by accident. Beneath this greatness you will always find as we said before, a rock-hewn foundation of worth.

Reputation When a man or a woman purchases a Piano or Player, one of the chief considerations is the reputation of the dealer. The purchaser must know that the dealer stands squarely behind his goods, that his word may always be taken at its face value, and that this guarantee is absolute and without reservation. The high and wide reputation of The Schroder Piano House has been built up through years of absolute integrity and good faith. People have come to know that they get what they think they are getting—exactly and always.

Quality In the minds of professional musicians and the public at large, the name of Schoeder has become associated with the Kurtzmann Piano. And the Kurtmann is generally accepted as the Piano without an equal. In tone, volume, expression and durability it recognizes no equal on earth. Around this sublime instrument Schroeder has gathered other Pianos of merit so that the purchaser is afforder every opportunity for selection and preference.

Price No Piano house in Charleroi can sell so fine a Piano for so little money as Schroeder. No Piano house on this continent can sell for less. The reasons are perfectly clear. The cost of conducting the Schoeder business is far less than that of other dealers who sell one-third to one-tenth as many Pianos. This means a great saving on each Piano sold—which saving is passed on to the purchaser. Furthermore, becanse Schoeder sells so many Pianos he can sell at a far less profit. And this the public saves.

Four hundred new Pianos and Players (and scores of great bargains in used instruments) representing more than twenty different makes, enables you to choose from the World's Very Best at the price you want to pay. And every price shows you a genuine saving of $50 to $150.
